

Easy Targets

Frantic Redhead Productions & The Burglars of Hamm

Never before has an audience been so motivated to inflict pain on their entertainers. Armed with rolled up socks and a thirst for comedic violence, the paying public are allowed to run riot throughout this comedy caper. The comical notion is certainly original but also rather dangerous, as the audience's sadistic nature is let loose and everyone becomes decidedly trigger-happy. Without the socks, the show would still be delightfully funny - but the idea of cotton missiles are Easy Target's secret weapon, which adds a new dimension to an already jaw-droppingly good comedy. It's hot work and by the end, you cannot separate the sweat from the tears of laughter. This should be a daily comedy diet for every festival-goer.

C central, 4 - 19 Aug, 8:35pm , £8.50 , fpp 32

tw rating: 5/5

published: Aug-2006

[\[Tom Leaning\]](#)